

WHITE SUPREMACIST TERRORISM: A MULTIDISCIPLINARY ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION

Thursday, October 17 | Atrium (Edison 201) | 2:50 p.m. to 4 p.m.

(RSVP to Hettie V. Williams at hwilliam@monmouth.edu – refreshments will be served)

FEATURED PANELISTS:

Professor Claude Taylor, Department of Communication

Dr. Johanna Foster, Department of Political Science and Sociology

Dr. Walter D. Greason, School of Education

Professor Jamie Nappi, School of Social Work

MODERATOR:

Dr. Hettie V. Williams, Department of History and Anthropology

SYNOPSIS:

Monmouth University faculty across multiple disciplines, including history, sociology, social work, education, and communication studies, will discuss white supremacist terrorism in U.S. history, society, and culture. In these troubled times, we find it necessary to discuss this important topic that has placed the Republic on the brink of what some observers describe as a new “Civil War.” This is an interdisciplinary panel that will involve engaging the topics of race and racism from multiple perspectives. Discussants will also provide resources for further reading and teaching about race, racism, and white supremacist terrorism.