USES FOR OF SUMMER

WHEN the garden calls she slips on a long-sleeved khaki blouse with glowing yellow poses and a patch pocket big enough to hold light tools. For the social life of a summer afternoon, pale pink Jersey silk embroidered in navy blue, short-sleeved, low-necked and with fluted tunic (below), expresses the new mode.

THAT excellent wearing material, white Japanese crêpe, made the pretty blouse above, with three-cornered pockets and trimmings of Copenhagen blue linen, embroidered with fine white wool. A last season's party frock would make a foundation over which to wear this pretty net tunic, with ribbon quilling.

AFTER its evenly plaited skirt (No. 1931), this dress observes every rule for smart simplicity with its long blouse (No. 2467), laid in soft plaits over the shoulder, its short kimono sleeves, round neck and effective bit of embroidery. It is a
