

1966 B

Phil Avery gets two frozen meals a week. Can this marriage be saved?

It's not the idea of having a frozen meal that strikes terror in Phil's heart. (Convenience foods play a useful role in the lives of most of us.)

It's the meals themselves. The gooey, soupy pot pies. The blah casseroles.

The solution, then, is not to stop serving frozen meals. Just start serving Schrafft's.

(Mrs. Avery, are you listening?)

For instance, Schrafft's makes a Frozen Chicken Pie such as to bring tears of gladness to Phil Avery's eyes.

Big slab-like chunks of juicy chicken meat. Breast and thigh from plump, tender young birds.

Along with tender peas and potatoes and carrots, and a delicately seasoned creamy chicken gravy, all stuffed under a shortening-rich crust that just sort of flakes into deliciousness when you crack a fork through it.

It takes a lot to make a frozen chicken pie this good and generous.

But to save a marriage like the Averys' it's the least we can do.

FRANK G. SHATTUCK COMPANY

HURRY-UP MEALS YOU DON'T HAVE TO MAKE EXCUSES FOR.

SCHRAFFT'S

Ad 113 NY 88
INFO CENTER

Jan 11 1966