Answers to questions parents ask us.

How can I supplement my baby's diet without interfering with breast feeding?

Breast-fed babies are very fortunate. They receive a sound nutritional start, and the special closeness of breast feeding is a wonderful foundation for a secure and loving relationship.

It's no wonder that many breast-feeding mothers are reluctant to introduce bottle fed formula when the time comes to supplement breast milk. When bottle feedings fulfill baby's need to suckle, breast milk stimulation diminishes, and the nursing experience may be shortened.

By spoon feeding Gerber Baby Foods you can add needed nutrients to your baby's diet and begin an important developmental step.

Spoon feeding provides baby with new tastes and textures, new stimulation, and a new opportunity to socialize that can be a valuable source of nutrients when needed.

The addition of wholesome Gerber foods can help meet your baby's growing nutrient needs while you continue to nurse.
