PENNSYLVANIA: MORE VOTERS TRUST BIDEN ON COVID

Challenger pulls into double-digit lead over Trump

West Long Branch, NJ – Joe Biden holds a 12-point lead over Donald Trump among all registered voters in Pennsylvania and anywhere from an 8-point to 11-point lead among likely voters, according to the Monmouth (“Mon-muth”) University Poll. This marks an improvement from Biden’s single-digit lead in a Monmouth poll just over one month ago. More voters trust the challenger than the incumbent on key issues, such as handling the pandemic. The poll does not find much shift in opinion since the president’s own Covid-19 diagnosis. Other findings show a Democratic advantage in a trio of statewide office races and a tight margin in the generic party preference for Congress.

Among all registered voters in Pennsylvania, the race for president stands at 54% for Biden and 42% for Trump. Another 1% support Libertarian Jo Jorgensen and 2% are undecided. Biden maintains a sizable lead when likely voter models are applied. A model based on a somewhat higher level of turnout than 2016 puts the race at 54% for Biden and 43% for Trump, while one reflecting lower turnout has it at 53% for Biden and 45% for Trump.

The results show a wider gap than Monmouth’s poll one month ago, when Biden held a 49% to 45% lead among registered voters. The current race standing is more in line with Monmouth’s July poll, which had it at 53% Biden to 40% Trump. A significantly larger number of voters say Biden (60%) has at least some understanding of their day to day concerns than say the same about Trump (45%).

“If any recent event moved the needle it was more likely last week’s debate than the president’s Covid diagnosis. What seems to be more important than either event, though, is voters’ focus on which candidate they trust more on the issues that keep them up at night,” said Patrick Murray, director of the independent Monmouth University Polling Institute.

The poll found little differentiation in vote preferences before and after the president revealed he has Covid-19. Half of the poll’s interviews were conducted on each side of that breaking news. After adjusting for the sample’s party registration balance in each half, Biden held a 54% to 42% lead among registered voters in interviews conducted Wednesday and Thursday and a similar 55% to 42% lead in the Friday through Sunday period.

There was also very little movement in key issues metrics – including the pandemic. Overall, 52% of Pennsylvania voters trust Biden more to handle the coronavirus pandemic and just 32% give the edge to Trump on this issue. Before the president’s diagnosis was made public, 52% trusted Biden more and 34% trusted Trump. After the news broke, it was 52% for Biden and 29% for Trump.

The results are similar on other key issues, including keeping health care affordable and accessible, where 48% trust the Democrat more (46% before Friday and 50% since Friday) and 34% trust the Republican more (34% both before and since). Biden has a small advantage on handling law and order. Just over 4 in 10 trust Biden on this issue (45% overall, with 43% before and 46% since Friday) and a slightly smaller number trust Trump (41% overall, with 40% before and 42% since Friday).

Biden lags Trump on being trusted more to create jobs and strengthen the economy by 39% to 44%. The Democrat’s trust number on the economy went from 37% before Friday to 41% since Friday, while Trump’s number stayed stable (45% before and 44% since). All of the pre- and post-Covid news shifts shown here are well within the survey margin of error for each half of the sample.

“We’ve grown accustomed to big news not having any effect on the needle. This is not good news for Trump, who really needs to see that needle move. If anything, the president’s health crisis may be reminding voters about their own vulnerability,” said Murray.

When asked about how much each of these four issues worry them personally, the top concerns for voters are the possible breakdown of law and order (58% worry a lot) and the coronavirus pandemic

(54%). These are followed by knowing they will have access to medical care if they need it (46%) and knowing they will have a stable income next year (44%).

“Trump may be strongest on jobs and the economy but that seems to be an issue that is farther down the list of things that keep Pennsylvanians up at night. On the other hand, an issue he has successfully elevated in the debate – law and order – may actually be helping his opponent more,” said Murray.

Demographically, Biden has made gains across the board. Of particular note, he now leads Trump by 54% to 45% among middle-aged voters (50 to 64 years old). This is a group that Trump led by 54% to 45% in Monmouth’s August Pennsylvania poll and has generally led in most states throughout the campaign. Biden maintains leads he has held with younger voters (54% to 40% among those aged 18 to 49) and senior voters (55% to 42% among those aged 65 or older).

Biden has pulled even with Trump among white voters (49% to 48%). The Democrat has also expanded his lead among voters of color (83% to 16%), mainly by moving many of them from being “undecided” over the past month. Strengthening his position among this group also translates into a stronger showing for the Democrat in the four counties Hillary Clinton won decisively in 2016.* Biden now leads in this blue core by 77% to 20% compared with 65% to 30% one month ago.

Biden has retaken the edge in ten counties where the vote margins were closest in the 2016 presidential election. In these swing counties*, which are concentrated in a swath that runs from the Philadelphia suburbs into the northeast region of the commonwealth, the race stands at 53% for Biden and 42% for Trump. Voters in these counties were divided at 46% for Trump and 44% for Biden in Monmouth’s August poll. Trump has a 22-point lead (59% to 37%) in the counties he won handily four years ago. This is consistent with his standing in these counties a month ago, but off the 34-point margin he had in 2016.

“There appears to be a bump in urban and suburban enthusiasm for Biden. This could just be a natural drift as we get closer to Election Day, but it could also be prodded along by a backlash against divisive messaging around law and order,” said Murray.

Just under half (48%) of registered voters in the commonwealth say they are certain to vote for Biden – up from 43% in late August – while just over half (51%) are not at all likely to vote for Trump – up from 47%. Biden currently has a 50% favorable to 44% unfavorable rating from Pennsylvania voters, while Trump earns a 40% favorable and 52% unfavorable one. Opinion of Biden has ticked up since late August (48% favorable and 46% unfavorable) while opinion of Trump has turned slightly more negative since then (44% favorable and 51% unfavorable).

– Other contests –

The race for president may have shifted in the past month, but the Monmouth University Poll finds greater stability in other Pennsylvania contests. In the generic ballot test for the U.S. House of Representatives election, 49% of registered voters statewide currently support the Democratic candidate in their district and 45% back the Republican. This result is basically unchanged from 48% to 45% in late August and 49% to 45% in July. Applying likely voter models to the current poll, high turnout puts the statewide House vote choice at 49% Democrat and 45% Republican while low turnout has it at 49% Democrat and 46% Republican.

Democrats have made some gains in key statewide office races on the ballot this year. In the race for Attorney General, incumbent Josh Shapiro leads Heather Heidelbaugh by 15 points among all registered voters (53% to 38%), compared with a 10-point lead one month ago (51% to 41%). In the State Treasurer contest, incumbent Joe Torsella leads Stacy Garrity by 6 points among all registered voters (47% to 41%), similar to his prior 5-point lead (45% to 40%). The open seat contest for Auditor General has Democrat Nina Ahmad ahead of Republican Timothy DeFoor by 6 points (46% to 40%), compared with the prior poll’s 2-point lead for Ahmad (43% to 41%). It is important to note that only Shapiro’s lead is outside the poll’s margin of sampling error.

Optimism about this year’s presidential election outcome has declined, especially among Trump’s partisans, although they remain slightly more confident than other voters. Currently, 53% of voters say they are optimistic about the presidential election, down from 63% in prior Pennsylvania polls. The biggest drop has come from Republican voters who say they are very optimistic (from 51% a month ago to 25% now). There have been smaller drops in this sentiment among Democrats (from 26% to 18%) and independents (from 22% to 12%) over the same time period.

The Monmouth University Poll was conducted by telephone from September 30 to October 4, 2020 with 500 Pennsylvania registered voters. The question results in this release have a margin of error of +/- 4.4 percentage points. The poll was conducted by the Monmouth University Polling Institute in West Long Branch, NJ.

* 2016 presidential margin by county groupings:

Clinton (34% of vote) – Clinton won these counties by more than 10 points, with a cumulative vote of 66.3% to 30.7% (Allegheny, Delaware, Montgomery, Philadelphia).

METHODOLOGY

The Monmouth University Poll was sponsored and conducted by the Monmouth University Polling Institute from September 30 to October 4, 2020 with a statewide random sample of 500 Pennsylvania voters drawn from a list of registered voters. This includes 170 contacted by a live interviewer on a landline telephone and 330 contacted by a live interviewer on a cell phone, in English. Monmouth is responsible for all aspects of the survey design, data weighting and analysis. The full sample is weighted for party registration, age, gender, race, education, and region based on state voter registration list information and U.S. Census information (CPS 2018 supplement). Data collection support provided by Braun Research (field) and Aristotle (voter sample). For results based on the full voter sample, one can say with 95% confidence that the error attributable to sampling has a maximum margin of plus or minus 4.4 percentage points (unadjusted for sample design). Sampling error can be larger for sub-groups (see table below). In addition to sampling error, one should bear in mind that question wording and practical difficulties in conducting surveys can introduce error or bias into the findings of opinion polls.
