NATIONAL: McGAHN, MUELLER SHOULD TESTIFY

Trump rating stable; less than half say Russia ‘definitely’ interfered in 2016

West Long Branch, NJ – Most Americans would like to see special counsel Robert Mueller and former White House counsel Don McGahn appear before Congress to testify about the Russia investigation. The latest Monmouth University Poll also finds widespread public support for providing Congress an unredacted copy of Mueller’s report, while at the same time showing a preference for having the legislative branch move on to other issues. Public opinion on Russian interference in the 2016 election has not changed following the report’s publication. The poll also finds continued stability for President Donald Trump’s job rating, re-election prospects, and public appetite for impeachment.

Two-thirds of Americans (67%) say that McGahn should appear before Congress to testify about what he knew as a key witness in the investigation. This includes 56% who say that McGahn should appear at a public hearing and 10% who say that it should only be in a closed setting. One-fifth (20%) say McGahn should not appear before Congress. Most Democrats (90%) and independents (65%) say McGahn should testify before Congress, while Republicans are split (41% should and 38% should not). The poll was taken before McGahn refused to appear for a scheduled House Judiciary Committee hearing on Tuesday.

A majority expects that Congress could learn something new from McGahn, although just 22% say this is very likely to happen while 30% say it is only somewhat likely. Another 14% say it is not too likely and 23% say it is not at all likely that Congress would learn anything from McGahn’s testimony that was not already in the Muller report. Another 12% are unsure. Just over half of the public has heard about McGahn’s participation in the Mueller investigation – 12% have heard a lot and 45% a little about it – but more than 4-in-10 (43%) have not heard anything about this.

Nearly 3-in-4 Americans (73%) say that Mueller should appear before Congress to testify about his investigation. This includes 58% who say that Mueller should appear at a public hearing and 14% who say that it should only be in a closed setting. Another 20% say Mueller should not appear before Congress.

More than two-thirds of the public (69%) says that Congress should get a full version of the Mueller report along with supporting documents. Just 21% say Congress should only have access to the redacted version. In a Monmouth poll released the day before the Mueller report was published last month, 60% said Congress should have access to the full report. Republicans are slightly more likely to support (44%) than oppose (40%) giving Congress the full report. In April, just 33% of Republicans supported releasing the full report while 55% opposed this. Fully 91% of Democrats and 68% of independents currently say Congress should be able to see the full report.

While a clear majority of the public supports getting more details about the Mueller report, just over half (52%) say that Congress should move on to other issues now that the investigation has concluded. Just 41% say that Congress should continue to look into concerns related to the inquiry. These results are similar to the public's opinion last month just before the report was released when 54% said it was time to move on and 39% wanted Congress to continue the investigation.

“The public wants the air to be cleared, but the poll sends some mixed messages. This investigation has become so pervasive that it is seen as distracting Congress from the business of governing. The irony is that further stonewalling by the Trump administration could actually pay off in short-term political losses for the Democrats as they get bogged down in legal battles over subpoenas,” said Patrick Murray, director of the independent Monmouth University Polling Institute.

Trump's overall job rating stands at 40% approve and 52% disapprove, which is similar to his 40% to 54% rating in April. Over the past 12 months, the president's approval rating has ranged between 40% and 44% while his disapproval rating has ranged between 46% and 54%. The president's job rating with different partisan groups currently stands at 86% approve and 11% disapprove among Republicans, 37% to 50% among independents, and 6% to 91% among Democrats.

Fewer than 4-in-10 registered voters (37%) say that Trump should be reelected in 2020. A majority of 60% say it is time to have someone new in the Oval Office. These results have been fairly consistent since November.

The poll finds that 39% of Americans feel that Trump should be impeached and compelled to leave the presidency while 56% disagree with this course of action. Support for the president's removal via impeachment has ranged between 36% and 42% since July 2017. Opposition to impeachment has ranged between 53% and 59% during the same time.

“Once again, the main Trump metrics are basically impervious to current events. A majority want someone else in the Oval Office, but are willing to wait until the next election,” said Murray.

The poll also finds stability in the public’s assessment of Russian interference in the last U.S. presidential election. Even though the Mueller report’s conclusion about this was unambiguous, just under half (44%) of the public says that Russia definitely tried to interfere in the 2016 election. This compares to between 36% and 43% who said the same in prior polls. Another 29% say that Russian interference probably happened, 12% say it probably did not happen and 11% say that it definitely did not happen. Just under half (49%) say Russian interference caused a lot of damage to American democracy. Prior poll results ranged between 44% and 47% who said this interference caused a lot of damage. Another 19% say this caused a little damage and 28% say it caused no damage.

Over half of the public feels that Russia also tried to interfere in last year’s midterm elections (21% definitely and 36% probably). This is slightly lower than the number who expected this to happen in a March 2018 poll (26% definitely and 38% probably). Still, 60% of the public says that the U.S. is not doing enough to stop Russian interference in the American electoral system. Just 28% say that it is doing enough. These findings are in line with past poll results.

The Monmouth University Poll also finds that 20% of Americans approve of the job Congress is doing and 71% disapprove. A little over one-quarter (29%) say the country is headed in the right direction while 63% say things have gotten off on the wrong track. These results are similar to Monmouth poll findings from last month.

The Monmouth University Poll was conducted by telephone from May 16 to 20, 2019 with 802 adults in the United States. The question results in this release have a margin of error of +/- 3.5 percentage points. The poll was conducted by the Monmouth University Polling Institute in West Long Branch, NJ.

METHODOLOGY

The Monmouth University Poll was sponsored and conducted by the Monmouth University Polling Institute from May 16 to 20, 2019 with a national random sample of 802 adults age 18 and older, in English. This includes 322 contacted by a live interviewer on a landline telephone and 480 contacted by a live interviewer on a cell phone. Telephone numbers were selected through random digit dialing and landline respondents were selected with a modified Trolldahl-Carter youngest adult household screen. Monmouth is responsible for all aspects of the survey design, data weighting and analysis. Final sample is weighted for region, age, education, gender and race based on US Census information. Data collection support provided by Braun Research (field) and Dynata (RDD sample). For results based on this sample, one can say with 95% confidence that the error attributable to sampling has a maximum margin of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points (unadjusted for sample design). Sampling error can be larger for sub-groups (see table below). In addition to sampling error, one should bear in mind that question wording and practical difficulties in conducting surveys can introduce error or bias into the findings of opinion polls.
