Master of Arts in Anthropology

Prepare for your career in historical archaeology, cultural resource management, medical anthropology, historic preservation, geographic information systems (GIS), or international development. Explore the concepts and principles of anthropology with a highly regarded faculty at leading regional institution while developing your skills and knowledge.

- 30-credit program provides expertise in theoretical and methodological processes and procedures.
- Study with faculty members whose research focuses on the historical archaeology of the Middle Atlantic States and Caribbean, medical anthropology, and the peoples and cultures of Latin America.
- Gain real-world skills and work experience locally and nationally.
- Become prepared for continued graduate education in anthropology at the PhD level.
- Weekend, summer, and hybrid course offerings available.

Visit www.monmouth.edu/anthropology for further details about this program.